

CASE

After the Varsity Game

When Bob and Bill

Set out to hike

From Varsity town

Back to old McGill,

Without spending more

Than five dollars,

Some fraternity brothers

Said, "It can't be done."

But Bob and Bill

Staked a wager

That it could,

And they proved to be right.

And it took only three days

To win the bet.

This is how it was done:

They did not overlook

The important detail

Of presenting a neat

And refined appearance.

And so they were often

Invited to ride,

And in all,

From Toronto home,

They rode altogether

With 35 motorists.

We wonder how many

Invitations to ride

They would have received

Had they looked like hoboes.

Bob and Bill appreciated

The value of refinement,

Were therefore helped along,

And won their wager.

Good luck to them,

They deserved to win.

Any man who appreciates

Good clothes

Deserves to win,

And usually does.

Look around at

The successful men:

They are invariably

Well dressed.

That's why we say,

"When buying clothes,

Buy GOOD clothes."

They are worth more;

They make you

Worth more, too,

And they are cheaper

In the end.

Please remember—

Case clothes are good clothes.

We thank you.

JAPAN WAS SUBJECT OF DISCUSSION

At Meeting of McGill Historical Club Last Night

ABLE SPEAKERS

Japs Have Made Wonderful Advance in Thirty Years

Japan, a country which is much in the public eye at present because of the terrible September disaster, and because of its wonderful rise of late years from an insignificant state to one of the world powers, was the subject of discussion of last night's meeting of the McGill Historical Club at the residence of Guy Tombs, Esq., Westmount.

Two papers were read one on Japan's history to the end of the nineteenth century, by L. Sessenwein, and the other on modern Japan by C. L. Copland. Both showed that a careful study of a long and complicated gave a very able and satisfactory account in a limited length of time.

The wonderful energy and adaptability of the Japs was well brought out. Until thirty years ago Japan had nothing to do with western civilization and western ideas, yet to-day she has assimilated these and has worked her way up in the sciences of war and the arts of peace to a level with the greatest European powers.

Sessenwein told the story of the Mikado's empire from the earliest days when the Japanese first came to the islands and conquered them. Their early history and mythology, stated the speaker, are inseparable, for their mythology elevated the Imperial family and this was the root of their patriotism and the basis of empire.

The speaker traced Japan's history through centuries of civil war and conflict. The power of the nobles overshadowed that of the throne, while the nobles for their part were continually at strife. Mongol invasions were repulsed, a feudal system established but through it all the internal dissension went on. For a time one strong leader might hold the country quiet but it was not until the sixteenth century that a period of continual peace set in. And then foreigners caused such disturbances that Japan completely severed herself from connections with western states. It was not until the later years of the nineteenth century that the barriers of exclusion were broken down and the Nipponese Empire began that wonderful advance along modern lines. Their war with China and a war with their ancient military class proved the fighting qualities of the modern Jap while their wonderful victory over Russia gained them universal recognition.

Copland gave an outline of general conditions in the Japan of to-day. Through successive stages she has established a constitutional government, centered around a democratic Imperial family. Religion is free and education compulsory with four great Imperial universities having an enrollment, in 1913 of 29,000 students. Japan's system of defence is one of universal service.

UNION HOUSE DANCE TO BE GALA AFFAIR

Open Dining Room Opposite Cafeteria at Noon

ANOTHER SMOKER

Union House Committees Make Various Reports

Plans are already well under way for the Union House Dance, according to a report made before the meeting of the Union House Committee, yesterday afternoon in the Union.

The Union House Dance will be held on December the fourteenth and is the only formal dance given by the Union so it offers the only chance for the elite to sport their tuxedos.

No efforts have been spared to make this dance a success and Adey's orchestra has been engaged whilst the refreshments served will be of the best. The entire dance schedule for this gala event is in the capable hands of Bob Dingman, Science '25 and O'Regan, Medicine '26.

The next informal will take place a week from Friday, the tickets being placed on sale on Wednesday at the regular price. It has been rumored that drastic measures will be taken to see that the informality of dress is observed, and that anyone in tuxedo will be severely dealt with. This right is reserved for the male chaperones only.

The Union also proposes to hold a smoker on Tuesday, November the twentieth, but the plans for this will not be announced until later.

The Billiard Committee reported that table number four has been completely repaired and now has new cushions and new pockets. All the tables are now in fine condition. It is the intention of the Committee to run off a tournament, such as in previous years, before Christmas. (Continued on Page 3)

GIVE THE TEAM A SEND-OFF

When the Senior Rugby squad left for Kingston nearly two weeks ago there were actually four men at the station to bid the players the best of luck and a final farewell. The send-off, naturally enough, was not very enthusiastic, for crowds of students did not throng the platform and McGill yells did not echo through the rafters. This, to put it extremely mildly, was somewhat of a pity, for the team was in need of all the support it could get and unfortunately the students failed to give it. In all fairness, however, we must admit that the fault was not entirely theirs, for advance notices had not been exceptionally numerous and if the undergraduate body had not perused its official publication very carefully, blissful ignorance might well have resulted.

But as we saw the train pull out that day, we thought, in the quiet moment, of the great send-offs which had been given to teams of former days. We saw in our mind's eye, the hundreds of rooters gathered around the car, which was to carry the Red and White representatives to the enemy's lair. We saw the tams of numerous R.V.C.-ettes and we heard the roars of "Let her go" as the squad was given its final farewell, as the train started to move slowly down the tracks, out of the station. The team was going away and the issue of the conflict was uncertain. It might be victory, it might be defeat, but the players knew that back home the undergraduates were giving their support and it meant a lot much more than we, with our petty vocabulary, can ever tell.

To-morrow night the squad of 1923 sets out towards its last intercollegiate battle. A victory means a tie for second place, while a defeat means the cellar. But who's talking of defeat? The team is out to win and the team will win if all players know that each and every undergraduate is backing them up. True, there will be many at the game, but there will be many more at home. The best way we can show our support, then, is to be down at the station when the train starts on its way to the Queen City, the stronghold of the Blue and White. This time there will be no lack of publicity. To-morrow morning the Daily will carry full details for the rooters and if the old spirit is still alive the Thundering Thousand, the R.V.C. and—might we also say the members of the faculty?—will all be on hand to give their little in the big fight. Keep Thursday night open then for the team and give the football men the biggest send-off of the century.

Special arrangements have been made with Kennedy Taxis to take a limited number of men to Toronto this week-end. The trip will be made in a fast, comfortable bus and a special price of $15 has been obtained.

This offers a splendid opportunity for McGill rooters to see their Alma Mater engage Varsity in deadly combat for second place in intercollegiate rugby.

It was felt that with the exceptionally fine weather prevailing that a bus trip would meet with the approval of many who are contemplating going up. Such trip should prove very pleasant with a bunch of good fellows along. The plan is to take the American roads to Prescott and from there continue on the Canadian side. The roads are in fine condition from Prescott to Toronto. This is a good chance to see Northern New York and Eastern Ontario at closer range than from a train window. It is intended to decorate the bus and make it a real McGill invasion.

The bus will leave on Friday and return Monday or Tuesday according to the wishes of those making the trip.

It is essential that all those who are interested attend to this matter today as the bus must be gone over before Friday.

Information may be had from J. A. McQuire, Med. '25, Strathcona Hall, Up. 1088 or J. Lindsay, Med. '25 Up. 9140.

Do your bit. Be at the station Thursday night.

THE IMPERIAL

An exceptionally fine programme is offered at the Imperial this week and judging by the capacity house that greeted it last night some record crowds should be present during its run.

Songs, laughter and thrills all go to make up an excellent show, and the management is to be complimented on their presentation.

Eddie Nelson, a black-face comedian, is one of the shining lights and his songs and stories bring forth well merited applause.

A sketch, "Blondes," with Charles Compton and William MacNeil, is very good and features as one of the big hits.

Dorothy Wahl gives a rendering of songs and intersperses them with several elocutional offerings.

"Don't make me laugh," provides plenty of amusement and Miss Parker impersonating a Yiddish character, proves herself an excellent comedienne as does her partner, Mr. Butler.

"Dance Varieties" and acrobatic feats conclude the vaudeville of the programme.

"The Broken Wings" is the feature picture and what with an aeroplane crash, Mexican bandits, and a pretty girl, things travel pretty fast.

A dancing contest every Monday night, for which the management of the theatre have put up large prizes, is now under way and the initial entries Monday night proved very good, the audience warmly receiving them.

Give the men a hearty send off Thursday night.

PLAN BIG SEND-OFF FOR RED AND WHITE

A big send off is planned for the McGill Senior rugby team when they leave Montreal Thursday night for the final of the intercollegiate series against Varsity on Saturday.

The plans for the send off are in the hands of Jeff Harding, McGill's cheer, leader, who stated that complete arrangements will be announced in Thursday's Daily.

You have an appointment at the station Thursday evening.

See Thursday's Daily for full details.

THE REVIEWER REVIEWED

"A Musical Motley"
In "A Musical Motley," a delightful collection of essays by Ernest Newman, there is a reference to "a diabolical new musical game, designed, apparently, for the amusement of the public and the confusion of the critics." A number of musical recitals had been arranged in London, Manchester, and other English cities, in which the names of the composers were withheld in order, as it was said, to give the music greater freedom to make its appeal. That may all be very well, says Mr. Newman, but how about the musical critic? How can he reasonably be expected to say whether a given piece of music is good or bad unless he knows whether it is by a Wagner or a Wilkins, a Beethoven or a Binks? The whole thing is a plot designed to make the critics look even bigger fools than they are at present.

The book reviewer can rarely if ever be placed in a similar predicament. He deals with new books and modern writers. None of the targets of his critical attack stand upon the heights from which Beethoven and Wagner look down upon the present-day strivers after expression. He has fewer idols which he must reverence and respect. He is more willing to direct his attention to the feet of clay. Even if, through some chance, he were to deal roughly with something by Conrad or H. G. Wells not knowing by whom it had been written, he would not scandalize his colleagues nearly as much as did Newman with his ridicule of a flute solo of Mozart's under the impression that it was composed by a second-rate English musician.

As a literary experiment, it would be of more than ordinary interest to set a number of reviewers at work upon some acknowledged masterpieces knowing nothing about the works or their authors. Such book-reviewers are of course almost as rare as the Great Auk, but possible here and there a few might be found. I tremble at the thought of what would happen to, say, Shakespeare, Browning, and some of Thackeray and Dickens at their hands. I can see some of their phrases before me, "a total lack of understanding of fundamental human motives," "a plot that is marred by frequent digressions and an entire absence of continuity," "language that is obscure and often meaningless." I know that I myself would say some very harsh things about a great deal of George Eliot. There is probably no one of our literary idols who would stand erect under the strain of these conditions.

As far as living writers are concerned, the same would hold true, but with important differences of degree. It is a commonplace that we usually find what we are looking for. If we pick up for review a book by a man who previously has pleased us, we shall expect this book to be good, and the good things in it will be allowed to impress us with more than ordinary vigor. If conditions are reversed, and this particular writer has in the past been one of our pet aversions, the book will have to be good indeed if it is to overcome any of the anticipatory antagonism with which we read it. A little thing by Barrie might be described as "mawkish sentimentalism" (whatever that may mean) or as "true romance in its most charming and delightful form" according to what we had decided previously about its author. As a matter of fact I have seen both these opinions, in almost the same words, expressed with reference to the little Scott.

If the book reviewer is content merely to "review" the book, to give us a summary of what it contains, he can keep out of trouble very successfully. But he wishes, rightly in my opinion, to do more than that. Perhaps he will resemble Macaulay, in this one respect if in no other, that he will use his review merely as a peg upon which to hang his own opinions about whatever topic, and attempt to estimate the value of the book, to judge its worth as an artistic production or a scientific contribution. In that case, Heaven help the author, for now personality and prejudice rule the roost, and these will help to determine whether, for the time being at least, he is to scale Olympus or bury his head in the dust.

To be prejudiced is human. To expect the book-reviewer to be anything else is to deny him an elemental human right which the rest of us insist on exercising. All that we may legitimately ask of him is that he be independent in his prejudices, that he be willing to point out weaknesses even when they are found in the literary giants of his own or any other period, and that he keep his eyes open for beauty and his mind open for truth in strange and unexpected places. To demand of him a purely rational appraisal is out of the question, for the standards of literary criticism are elastic and arbitrary. If he can give us an idea of what the book contains, and in addition a description of his own reaction to it which may be logical but which must be interesting, we should pat him on his metaphorical back and admit that he has done well.

An impartial judgement, however, is not within his sphere.
From the way in which I have been laying down the law, you will undoubtedly infer that I have certainly not written more than two, or possibly three book reviews in my life. You are quite right.

RECENT BOOKS

"The Ballad Of St. Barbara"
As a discerning critic of the New York Times put it only the other day, "the trouble with Mr. Chesterton is that he is far too Chestertonian." His prose is so often tiresome prolix, yawningly redundant. But the Muse of Poetry exacts from her devotees a most holy discipline, and when Mr. Chesterton discovered that he could write poetry, his readers discovered that their idol, shorn forcibly of superfluous trappings, and driven to the expression of his singularly clever thoughts in chiseled language, was whole trouble with the Chesterton of the prose essays had been that there was far too much of him. I do not intend this for a pointed personal remark.

A year or so ago he published his "Poems," and now within the last few months he has given us his "Ballad of St. Barbara." If his first volume was good his second is even better. Although I would not place the Ballad itself on a higher plane than that wonderful "Battle of Lepanto" that he gave us in the "Poems," yet he spreads a more audacious wing and ascends to rarer heights in the more recent work. This quatrain has been often quoted, and no critic could very well fail to do so. It is a description of the unleashing of the Allied batteries in the battle of the Marne:

"A casement and a chasm and a thunder of doors undone,
"A seraph's strong wing shaken out
"The shock of its unshuttering,
"That split the shattered sunlight
"From a lilted behind the sun."

What can anyone say about these lines except that they reveal as bright a flash of genuine poetic inspiration as any that ever lighted on the greatest of our English poets. He has caught more than a little of the gorgeous power and the movement of the great Swinburne; a Swinburne, if you can conceive of the enormity of it, writing canticles to Our Lady, and obscured every now and then by the mystical cotton-wool clouds of a Francis Thompson. For it is a strange thing how a man's beliefs will colour his poetry. Consider the matchless ardour, the worship of beauty in the great Pagans, the majestic grimness of Milton, the conventionality of the rather flat Eighteenth Century deists, the infantile qualities and the child-like faith of Wordsworth. Tennyson, we are told, spent the better part of his latter period trying to reconcile science and religion, and "In Memoriam" is just the sort of result one would expect. Even an agnostic with a thick layer of culture like Aldous Huxley betrays himself in his "Leda," where the old pagan beauty is jostled by the jargon of psychoanalysis.

And Chesterton had no sooner to rhyme two lines together than he was stamped on the forehead with all the markings of a fin-de-siècle English Catholic poet, very beautiful, and often very obscure. I say fin-de-siècle advisedly, because Mr. Chesterton is certainly no Georgian. I mentioned Francis Thompson before, and I think Mr. Chesterton has caught much of his symbolism from him. Consider this first quatrain of a poem, "Nightmare," which is included in this new volume of poems:

"The silver and violet leopard of the night
"Spotted with stars and smooth with silence sprang;
"And though their doors stood open,
"The end of light
"Closed like a trap; and stillness was clung."

But Mr. Chesterton can climb higher than mere obscure beauty when he writes of his old heart's love, "Medievalism." Her is the old Quixote with his lance touched tilting at the ugly steel windmills of the present day:

"It is you who have made no rubric for saints, no raiment for lovers,
"Your caps that cry for a feather,
"Your roofs that sigh for a spire;
"Is it a dream from the dead if your own decay discovers
"Alive in the rotting graveyard the worm of the world's desire?"

There are some other fine poems in this volume that Mr. Chesterton lays on the altar of his beloved Dark Ages, notably a colourful series for Four Guides, the Glass-Stainers, the and the Bell-Ringers. Like his companion in arms, Mr. Hilaire Belloc, he sings of the English countryside, "purple seas of wine" and other delightful things, but he has caught one very objectionable habit from Mr. Belloc. He insists on forcing what is merely indifferently good satirical verse poetry the same covers with genuine poetry. No doubt such a beginning as:

"Abou Ben Adhem,—may his tribe decrease
"In peace—"

"By cautious birth-control and diet is exorbitantly funny from Mr. Chesterton's point of view, but it is emphatically not poetry. But he has one good salvo that is at the same time a poem, and I use it to conclude this writing. Perhaps some economists would prefer it not to be reprinted until after the next General Election in England, but Mr. Chesterton thinks the present is as good a time as any. He entitles it, "Elegy in a Country Churchyard."

"The men that worked for England
"They have their graves at home:
"And bees and birds of England
"About the cross can roam.
"But they that fought for England,
"Following a falling star,
"Alas, alas for England
"They have their graves afar."

"And they that rule in England,
"In stately conclaves meet,
"Alas, alas for England
"They have no graves as yet."

"Memories Of The Future"
"Memories of the Future," a recent piece of fiction by a young Catholic priest, will be received by many as an agreeable antidote to such works as "The Time Machine," "The War in the Air," and "The Food of the Gods" by the world's historians. It is written in the form of an autobiography, told naively by an old woman of the aristocracy in the year of Grace 1888, which naturally suggests the literary effusions of Margot Asquith. However, it resembles more fundamentally Edgar Allan Poe's sketch "Mellinta Tanta" ("These things are of the future"), where perhaps Father Knox got the germ of his book, although "Memories of the Future" deals with more ordinary subjects, such as intimate disclosures of life of the subject at school and at Oxford.

We are taken into a world inconceivably different from our age—a world where the synonym for "old-fashioned" is "Mid-Edwardian," referring of course to the days of the reign of the present rex futures. Of particular interest to the learned world is the casual mention of the fact that students are paid for attending lectures—a system which began about 1830. Readers of the "National Geographic" will be pleased to hear of the erection of a new state in central Europe, of which the nucleus is Switzerland. The official tongue is American and the state religion Catholic. There are no thieves in this new country, for gentlemen of that profession, finding it more remunerative to do so, have turned to the staple industry of the land—extracting money from tourists.

The author of this opus was an Anglican clergyman, but recently went over to Catholicism. He has retired from the world, his interest in mundane affairs has not entirely subsided, as the latest product of his pen eloquently testifies on society of to-day, simply with its characteristic features carried to extremes, will get the fullest satisfaction from it. In the society of the latter-day world school-girls speak a slang worthy of a certain class of contemporaneous young people, whose affectation of an unintelligible argot is truly disgusting, children have no respect for their elders, women smoke Benson and Hedges, and Mary-Baker-Eddyism and similar cults entirely detached from religion are the most popular forms of therapeutics.

Throughout the book the memoir style is maintained—particularly that silly wistfulness with which memoir writers are prone to refer to the good old days gone by. There are no discrepancies in the book, and no particular point is dragged in by its ears. The work, on the whole, is commendable and entertaining.

THE THEATRE

"He Who Gets Slapped"

Last night at His Majesty's I saw a Montreal audience stand in their places and applaud until they could applaud no more, and as we filed out into the drizzle a few moments later I caught a glimpse of what splendid old Aristotele was driving at when he spoke of the "purging of the emotions" occasioned by the impeccable performance of the true tragedy. For youthful enthusiasm can see nothing less than a high peak of artistic endeavour in the work of the New York Theatre Guild or a tragedian of consummate genius in Leonid Andreyev. There has been nothing like it on the boards of His Majesty's since Marjorie Harvey played in Maeterlinck's "Burgomaster of Stillemonde."

Besides being a dramatic triumph it was a full-handed slap in the face for the iniquitous star system. It is true that Mr. Basil Sydney played supremely well as "He," but so did Zita Johann as Consuelo, so did Florence Auer as Zhinda or Rauff Acklom as Alfred DeZano. There was not a weak spot in the entire cast, and it is an unusually large one. Every member of that Theatre Guild seems an artist to the marrow of his bones.

There have been many actors here as good as Basil Sydney, but what ruff-vast they brought with them, and what a poor, blotched thing their plays became.

It has been said of Leonid Andreyev that the most cheerful thing he ever wrote was "The Seven who were Hanged," and that was enough to make one break out into a cold sweat, and there is much truth in the saying. He is like all his Slav brother artists, a black child of genius. In "He who Gets Slapped" there is so much of his genius that one has no time for the pessimism. I am looking for the newspaper person who called it a tragedy-comedy.

One might as well call Hamlet a tragedy-comedy because of the jokes of the grave-diggers. It is the sort of tragedy that I used to think only Shakespeare would write; a blending of laughter and tears as life is a blending of both and all the while the imminent tragedy, coldly, logically certain, springing out of the very nature of the characters themselves.

"He" is a thinker out of touch with a world that has robbed him of his love and even of his ideas. He makes his way one day into the make-believe world of an idealized circus, where everyone is an artist performing his little task supremely well, even if it is only "to play Beethoven on a broomstick or Mozart on a bottle." He wishes to bury his old self in this artists' paradise, but he finds that it is not so very much different from the world "out there." There are the same loves and jealousies and hates. When he begins he can't even turn a summersault so they give him a job—he who gets slapped, and that is the tragedy of it all. The new role is just the same as the old one had been in the world outside. He falls in love with dainty little Consuelo, the bareback rider, and sometimes he manages to charm her out of herself by the magic of his poetry, but then she hears the call of the ring and of youth again, and "He" becomes only a clown in her eyes, just "He who gets slapped." It is the story of "I Pagliacci" over again, but with an added pathos because "He" is not really a clown. Finally when "He" sees that there is only one way of saving Consuelo from the spidery baron he takes it, and the curtain falls.

Anyone who knows Andreyev the novelist need not be told that the dialogue throughout is a continual thirst and parry of delicately balanced rapiers shot here and there with poetic Slavic symbolism. It is decidedly an intellectual play, and there is little in it of the "melancholy Dane." But all true tragedy it strikes right down to the bed-rock of human "crap." It is the story of "I Pagliacci" and Maeterlinck's "Burgomaster" in mind the next time anybody starts wallowing to me about the decadence of the modern drama he will be treated to as fine a display of lurid profanity as ever he witnessed. The drama is all right, but we only get it here in Montreal about once every three years. New York is a big city, six or seven millions I believe; and out of that number they can comb the few thousands necessary to support an institution like Theatre Guild. An elementary application of the rule of three will show just why the Montrealeers who really care have to put up with the rubbish they get.

On Thursday night they are playing Bernard Shaw's "Devil's Disciple," which is one of his earlier and lesser known plays. Shawian enthusiasts will tell you that it is not so good as "The Shewing up of Blanco Posnet," and press-agents that it is a "melodrama." It has the form of one, if you will, but as far as the matter is concerned one might as well call "Mrs. Warren's Profession" a musical comedy. Several decades of poison gas from the Hearst Press have left most Canadians with distorted views on the war of the American Revolution, and it may surprise them to find G. B. S. portraying General Burgoyne as a patriot and a gentleman, a patriot in as true a sense as Lincoln was. Some Americans and Mr. Lloyd George are not the only ones to forget this.

The supreme test of the Theatre Guild will come on Friday and Saturday.

day when they play Ibsen's "Peer Gynt," one of the hardest to stage convincingly of all the modern dramas. Personally I am going to haunt His Majesty's all this week if I have to pawn everything I own, and I cannot conceive of anyone doing less who witnessed their triumph in "He Who Gets Slapped."

CHIEFLY VERSE

LIFES TWILIGHT.

O'er the great lone rocky mountains
I have wandered:
Through the thick, wild, pine-tree forests
O'er the long, long, boundless prairies
Sought the sunset:
'Cross the storm-tossed, furious ocean
Searched in vain.
And the far, white, distant planets
Have revolved,
And the great blue, shimmering starlets
I have seen,
Still the world's a mystic dreamland
To me unknown.
Now comes the great, lone, awful venture
Of sinking death
I must travel alone,
And none on the long, white, endless road
Can bid me cheer.
As I lie on my kind, cruel death-bed
Someone enters,
And into my hand
Lays a soft white golden daisy
And smiling I die.

The North Woods in September.
The breath of winter is on the land,
For the wind from out of the North
Is cold.

The touch is felt of a deathly hand—
Summer is growing old.

Yet the trees are clothed in shining gold,
Garments of red and darkening green.
But fingers of an ethereal mould
Are tearing away the shimmering sheen.

For there comes a whisper from out of the sky;
Each limb shivers with ghastly fear
And leaves with a soft, sweet, rustling sigh,
Drop down to their earthly funeral bier.
Summer was born in the early spring;
Was softly fanned by a southern breath.
But though in life it's a glorious thing
Its greatest glory is found in death.

BIG EXPENSE BY LOSS OF EQUIPMENT

Athletic Managers Advised to Take Care

MEDICAL SERVICE

Delinquency in Filling Eligibility Forms Causes Fines

At a well attended meeting of Athletic Managers, held in the Board Room of the Union at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon, several matters of vital importance to athletics were discussed. Major Stewart Forbes occupied the chair.

The first matter discussed, was the issuing of equipment. A great deal is spent to replace that lost of appropriated by players. This extra expense is to a great extent unnecessary as the equipment issued by the various clubs is the property of the University and not of the individual player. Accordingly he stated, every player should make a point of returning all equipment issued to him by his club. It was pointed out that the money saved on equipment could be devoted to possibly another trip or to bringing in an outside team for a game. It was the general opinion of the managers that the players should co-operate and help to preserve the club's equipment and thus save expense.

The next item discussed was the filling-up of eligibility forms. Already quite a large sum has been paid in fines by the university due to the fact that players and managers had been delinquent in sending in their forms. Major Forbes asked the managers, therefore, to be more strict in making reports of games and filling up forms.

Medical attention for players injured during a game was next brought before the meeting. In emergency cases the player was to be sent immediately to the Royal Victoria or the Montreal General Hospital. Here he would be cared for by McGill doctors. In such cases the managers of the club to which the injured man belonged must notify the University Health Authorities at once. In less serious cases the patient would receive treatment from Dr. Harvey in the usual way at McIsaac Hall.

Before the close of the meeting H. Munroe, Athletic Editor of the Annual, asked all the clubs to get their pictures and write-ups in before Christmas.

RUGGERITES PLAY FOR CHAMPIONSHIP

McGill Plays Varsity at Home Saturday

This Saturday afternoon at the Percival Molson Memorial Stadium, the McGill English Rugby team will meet Varsity in a game that will decide the championship of the Intercollegiate series. McGill has to overcome the four-point lead obtained by Varsity in the game last Saturday.

A strenuous practice game between the first and second teams was held yesterday afternoon. Great improvement was noted in the backfield. Toronto's strong point, however, is their backfield so that the Red and White Ruggerites will have to work hard in this direction. Ross is their star three-quarters, while Pentleton is a shining light at full back.

Patterson, who has already gained fame on the track is showing up especially well.

The forwards are working well together and should prove a formidable opposition to the Torontonians.

Defeated Medicine '28 in Exhibition Game

In an exhibition game of indoor baseball played in the gymnasium of the Montreal High School yesterday afternoon, Dentistry '26 defeated Medicine '28 by the score of 16-5.

Dent. '26 had a well-balanced team out and showed particularly fine form in their fielding. They played well together throughout the entire game, giving very little away to their weaker opponents who did not work so well together.

At the end of the second inning the score was 8-2 in favour of Dent. This gave them a substantial lead of six runs which they held throughout, although Med. held them scoreless in the third inning while they added two points to their own score. From the fourth inning on, Dentistry had the game practically all their own way, adding eight more runs while Medicine could only manage to get one.

The pitching of both teams was remarkably good for this time of the season, many batters were struck out during the game. Shorker, of Dentistry, showed up particularly well in this department of the game and it is probably due to his steady pitching that Medicine was held to such a low score.

Neither of the teams were at full strength, both being short two players. This meant that each man had to cover a larger portion of the floor than usual and this in all probability accounts for the large number of runs which were scored during the game.

The new rules which came into being this year caused a few breaks in the game due to some of the players not being familiar with them. With a better knowledge of the rules and each team at full strength, a closer game may be expected when these two teams meet in a league fixture.

For Dentistry, Shorker, Goldberg and Rosenberg were best, while McDonald, Olmstead and Berland played well for the losers.

The line-up:
DENTISTRY	MEDICINE
Catcher	McDonald
Star	Pitcher
Shorker	F. Base
Pinklestein	S. Base
Watson	T. Base
Goldberg	R. Field
McKinnon	L. Field
Rosenberg	Greenberg

McGILL PLAYS U. OF T. GOLF ON SATURDAY

TEAM STRONG

Interfaculty Tournament in Two Weeks

The McGill Golf Club met in the Union last night preliminary to the forthcoming official match for the Intercollegiate Golf Championship with the University of Toronto Team on Saturday, November 10th at the Toronto Golf Club. Although the final arrangements have not been completed as yet, the likely schedule will consist of 36 holes of singles on Friday and 18 holes of four-ball on Saturday.

The McGill team is a strong one, W. G. Annable, the young Kanawki player is well known in Montreal golfing circles, having taken part with no small degree of success in several local and provincial tournaments.

A. B. Darling has played most of his golf on his home course at Hudson Heights, P. Q. where he is a holder of a number of cups. He has also held the club championship.

A. D. McCall, of the Beaconsfield Golf Club, is a player of promise. His hitting is straight through the fair way and he is very accurate on the green.

D. M. Hodgson is a player of slashing style and pretty form. On the other hand, W. L. Munro, who is not attractive to watch is effective from the tee and on the green.

The longest hitter on the team is R. N. Hayes who comes from Sarnia. His reputation is considerable, having on several occasions defeated F. G. Hoblitzell, the former Canadian Internationalist. The last man on the team is L. G. Mickles who made a brilliant showing for himself in the Alumni match. He is expected to play a good game on Saturday.

The team is practicing assiduously every day this week at the Royal Montreal Golf Club at Dixie. It will be of interest to golf fans to learn that an attempt will be made this Saturday after the match to organize a "Canadian Intercollegiate Golf Union." Permission to accomplish this has been granted by the Canadian Amateur Golf Union. This will be the first attempt to form an Intercollegiate Golf Union in Canada and speaks well for the growing interest shown in golf at Canadian universities.

Other business discussed by the club included a suggestion for Interfaculty matches between the members. These games will be played in all probability a week from this Saturday if the weather permits.

Concerning the tournament to be held with the professors next year, it will take place as early in the fall as possible. This will be of advantage to all concerned as those participating will be in their best form.

The club has settled its annual fee to be one dollar. Minor expenses of the club and its membership in the Intercollegiate Union necessitates this charge. The fifty men who played against the professors this year are considered members.

MECHANICAL CLUB VISITS CAR WORKS

Bridge at Ville St. Pierre, of which the huge concrete counterpoise tore away from its fastenings about a month ago. This rendered the bridge immovable, and the traffic through the Lachine Canal was completely held up for nearly three days while the bridge was being jacked up with lighters and removed bodily onto the canal bank.

At the Dominion Works the frames of the cars are built and all the heavy work is done; and the car bodies are then transferred by rail to the Turcot Works, where all the finishing work is done.

The Canadian Car and Foundry Company is just completing an order of 750 box cars for the Canadian National Railways. These cars are larger than the average box car, and will be able to carry 61 tons, or more than 2,000 bushels of grain each; as compared with about 46 tons or 1,500 bushels of grain which is the capacity of the average box car.

It is unfortunate that a recent order for passenger cars has just been completed, but there may be an order for two or three sleeping cars on hand that are about to be delivered.

Application has been made to visit the Dominion Bridge Company on Wednesday, Nov. 14th. All members and intending members of the Club are cordially invited to attend these trips.

SENIORS ARE ALL READY FOR BATTLE

Only One More Practice to be Held

LAST GAME

Win Over Varsity Gives Mc- Gill Tie for Second Place

Last night the Red and White held their second last practice of the season in preparation for the Varsity-Intercollegiate match. A light snow workout was followed by a short scrimmage with the "seconds." The way the squad played showed that they had not gone stale and the snappy way the plays were carried out boded a hard battle for the Blue and White next Saturday. The whole squad was on the field with the exception of Dick Wilson whom Mr. Shaughnessy is keeping out on account of a bad knee received in the "Tiger" game.

The squad that will meet Varsity will be in the main the same as that which met the Bengals. Charlie Robertson has probably earned the right to start at outside wing. His wonderful tackling in the last game when he made some almost impossible tackles placed him on the same plane as the best ends in the Canadian senior rugby and he will be a power to be reckoned with in the season's final intercollegiate at Toronto. McGregor and Norris will alternate at snap and Jack Flie is slated for the flying wing position. For linemen and midsmen there are Manson, Woodruff, Starke, Amaron, Dier, and Gordon. Dier or Gordon could also be sent in at flying wing if necessary. Mickles will be the choice for quarter-back while the first part of the half line work will be given to Hughes, Little, Hanna, with Murphy as relief.

The outside wing stations will be meted out Robertson, Wilson, Anderson, and McGillis. These players are pretty well on a par with one another and with any set of wings in intercollegiate rugby can be depended on to stop Snyder and his assistants. The way Starke was tearing through the Tiger line on Saturday gives credence to the belief that the same results can be obtained in the Varsity melee. The defensive system of Red and White squad is almost perfect and the Toronto boys are going to have to work hard to make ten yards in three downs. At the same time the Hanna-Hughes-Little trio have developed an end run that will be hard to stop. The line plunging of Mickles should prove one of the features of the game if the R. M. C. product is up to his usual form. Since the victory over the Tigers the Red and White supporters are conceded a much better chance to win and Coach Shaughnessy is entirely optimistic about the outcome.

Mother: "That young man that you're engaged to is a bad egg."

Daughter: "I know he is, that's the reason that I'm afraid to drop him."

She has been a leader in the Movement for the past three years having proven her ability at the Elgin Conferences. For the past month Miss Rutherford has been at Queens.
